Those who obtain work in the merning get food of a man who keeps a stand by the gate, and who trusts them after they are "taken on" for the din ner on which they work. As they go out at night after having received their wages, he gets his pay from the half crown each full worker has earne But those who fail to be engaged cannot obtain this credit, and must go hangry through the day. The struggle for labor, impressively described above, man, "like an Egyptian pitcher of tamed vipers. each struggling to get its head above the others." which is, alas, but a somewhat exaggerated image of that civilized and Christian Society which this Nineteenth Century everywhere has to boast of, or repent of.

It is hardly necessary to say that a mole of hydrogeneous ing so uncertain inevitably renders the laborer vicious, intemperate, idle and improvident. In this connection we quote Mr. Porter, who in his work on "The Progress of the Nation," has some just for Government in the coming trial of Captain Market on the Nation, has some just to give the casting away of the vessel.

In another letter drawn from him addressed to him, Mr. Kendall says:

Mr. Smith has sought to make an exchange of the word possess himself of that he will be a minimal witness. and instructive remarks, as follows:

"Previous to the formation of a canal in Ireland, "Previous to the formation of a canada in reaches, the men were improvident even to recklessness. NEW YORK, April 3 1250

Six — The glove letter to you from Mr Kendall has this moment been received here in New York, sent to me to peruse and transmit to you. It is estimated, in relation specially to the course pursued by you on the does noter your control, are fully in accordance with my own. You are hardly aware, should think of the disastron's effect of your policy on all our Telegraph interests, not less that out the public hieters. My own views, expressed to you in Boston, that your position was not lenable, and onfortunate whichever way it issued, whether you come dividitor or are defeated by the prese, are responded to by all elapastions in friends. I think, no listing, you ought to have consulted your copy opticies in the Telegraph interest, before you assumed to place them in a position with yourself. storage friends. I think, to be the Telegraph interest, is sailed your co-proportions in the Telegraph interest, is you assumed to place them in a position with yourself, against which, when understood as it how is by their, they assumedly wound have protected in the outset. There it is not yet too late for you to retrieve the harty and false step you have taken. Your obedient servant.

I gave in a letter to you, prepared vessed as twinto I sent through Prof. Morse, my views at length on the question involved.

In another letter drawn from him by questions

andressed to him, Mr. Kendall says:

Mr. Smith has sought to make an exchange of stocks by which he would possess himself of that held by Messes, Morse and Vall in the Malter Telegraph Company, with the avoided object of obtaining control of the like from Portland to the Bettish provinces. I was willing to sell him all our interests in the main lines east of Bostim, and thus relieve outers lives from all responsibility for their management. But having more matterly considered the subject, it made up my mind that we outly too! to increase the his power by such means, and hence the determination not to sell our interests on those lines, as an accounted in my enter of the 2t instant.

could have cleared the accused. Now, all this is very generous, very kind insumed as it is contrely grativednes and as Massachusetts is an innorant out of the way little State she ought to be directed how to administer her own laws. To show how superior is Gotham's mode of managing capital trials, as an example to Massachusetts and other unchightened regions, we subjoin a sketch from the proceedings of yesterday in the New York Court of Oyer and Terminer in the trial of Charles Growe for the murder of Wim. White in January last—

"The Jury was empanned, the Government witnesses examined, and one witness for the defense called, when a Juryman informed the Court that nesses examined, and one witness for the decrease called, when a Joryman informed the Court that one of their number could not speak a word of Eng-lish or understand anything that had been testified to. The prisoner's counsel declined making any proposition to the Court and Judge Edmonds or-dered the proceedings to stand adjourned until to morrow." The quotation is from a morning paper court of Justice which manage cases of caustic Courts of Justice which manage cases of confence so very lossely as to empanel a Jury proceed balf through a trial without knowing w er the Jurymen are deaf and dumb, or what is equivalent, without the power of understanding a word of the trial, should be overhauled by the wise and sympathetic of New York, and their own Courts reformed before they "cast the first stone at Massachusetts."
